COMMON SENSE IN RECONSTRUCTION

Those who have supposed that a new plan of reconstruction was likely to be adopted are not to be deceived. Instead of the articles of peace now in the hands of the American people, it has been made plain that the process of reconstructing the South can be none but orderly and methodical. But it is also evident that the new plan will rest on the shoulders of the American people, and that the Southern States will be governed by their own laws, and that the new government will be in the hands of the American people, and that the new government will be in the hands of the Southern States.

ITALY AND EUROPE

France and Italy have always been the two great powers in Europe, and their influence upon Italy is an interesting study. If we take the history of the two countries, we find that the whole story is like that of earlier, mythical times. A single hero, with a great destiny, with a mission to fulfill, like the national hero of a nation and a race, is the foundation of Italian and French political history. In Italy, as in France, the Church has been the most powerful influence, and it does not seem strange that the Frenchman and Italian of the same social class should be so similar in their political ideals.

EDUCATION IN THE SOUTHERN STATES

In the New York Tribune of October 18, there is a very valuable examination upon education. The first part of the article deals with the condition of the country in the South, and it is extremely interesting. The second part of the article deals with the condition of the country in the North, and it is very instructive. The third part of the article deals with the condition of the country in the West, and it is very instructive. The last part of the article deals with the condition of the country in the South, and it is very instructive.

The conclusion of the article is that the condition of the country in the South is far better than that of the country in the North, and that the country in the West is far better than that of the country in the South. The conclusion is that there is a great deal of truth in the article, and that the article is very valuable for the benefit of all who are interested in the condition of the country in the South, the North, and the West.
that knowledge is power, and it troubled.

The article of which we are speaking traces the causes of the present industrial depression between the poor whites and the blacks. But nothing is more apparent than the wonderful stability of a real Democracy, and the nineteenth century and the sign "may reach the content of the next issue, and the next!" and a discussion of the abuses of the system of the government, and the whole question of the "right to vote." But the organization of the working men is just as persistent in the influence of the different sections of the country. The working men of the North are the most intelligent; they are the ones who are struggling against the economic interests of the South, and they are the ones who are trying to get the real meaning of the American Constitution. The working men of the South are the ones who are struggling against the system of the Southern States. The working men of the West are the ones who are struggling against the system of the Western States.

The working men of the North are the ones who are struggling against the system of the Northern States. The working men of the West are the ones who are struggling against the system of the Western States. The working men of the South are the ones who are struggling against the system of the Southern States.

Under the circumstances we discover increased activity in the grain market. Prices are rising, and the demand for grain is increasing. The rapidity with which the grain is sold is due to the fact that the market is not yet fully supplied. The supply of grain is not yet in excess of the demand. The competition is not yet so keen as to cause a general decrease in prices.

The present crisis in the grain market is due to the fact that the demand for grain is increasing. The rapidity with which the grain is sold is due to the fact that the market is not yet fully supplied. The supply of grain is not yet in excess of the demand. The competition is not yet so keen as to cause a general decrease in prices.

The present crisis in the grain market is due to the fact that the demand for grain is increasing. The rapidity with which the grain is sold is due to the fact that the market is not yet fully supplied. The supply of grain is not yet in excess of the demand. The competition is not yet so keen as to cause a general decrease in prices.

The present crisis in the grain market is due to the fact that the demand for grain is increasing. The rapidity with which the grain is sold is due to the fact that the market is not yet fully supplied. The supply of grain is not yet in excess of the demand. The competition is not yet so keen as to cause a general decrease in prices.

The present crisis in the grain market is due to the fact that the demand for grain is increasing. The rapidity with which the grain is sold is due to the fact that the market is not yet fully supplied. The supply of grain is not yet in excess of the demand. The competition is not yet so keen as to cause a general decrease in prices.

The present crisis in the grain market is due to the fact that the demand for grain is increasing. The rapidity with which the grain is sold is due to the fact that the market is not yet fully supplied. The supply of grain is not yet in excess of the demand. The competition is not yet so keen as to cause a general decrease in prices.